

Apolonia's Souvenir?

Me and my big sister were doing the craziest dances all night and as soon as 'Fine Line' came on the entire standing crowd harmonized together. It felt surreal!

Annie's Souvenir?

Back then, before rock came to my village in France us girls were attending bals. I spent the whole night learning the tourist to impress the boys!

The band's drummer was known for throwing his sticks to the crowd at every gig so I made sure to be at the front. I felt on top of the world when I caught one.

Heading off to the Foo fighters concert after a long shift was the perfect way to blow off steam. I betted the night away with my girls!

For my 18th birthday, me and my mates went to see the pogues live. Everyone used to tear down the concert posters from the walls back then. Looking at my poster hung up and listening to the band takes me back to my rebellious teenage years!

Rock music had just started making its way to my small village in France. I had never heard such sounds or felt as electric before Johnny's performance!

The band was playing in my local area, last minute Fulham venue was only half full so me and the lads got to jump up on stage for a song. Felt goosebumps all over!
