I come from shadow and bone
And the hands of God that modelled me
I come from clay and mud and leaves
I come from the streak of light sharp against the dark of clouds
I come from the distant memories of Pakistan, partition
I come from family curry and the smell of spice
I come from the oiliness of kebabs and samosas
I come from juice of strawberries leaking from my mouth
I come from the plastic stool
I come from my mother's womb and the pain of birth
I come from teddy and blanket, toy doll and horses
I come from green grass that is now grey concrete
I come from green grass that is now grey concrete
I come from black asphalt

I come from hope
I come from Bradford
